Head of NY Times' 1619 Project backs away from entire premise!

BUT

Sent to 4,500 classrooms nationwide!! Jones tweeted: "He is right: ...The 1619 Project is not about history. It is about memory. I've always said that the 1619 Project is not a history.." disq.us/t/3qu6mk7

The Pulitzer Center said it did so because the 1619 Project "challenges us to reframe U.S. history by marking the year when the first enslaved Africans arrived on Virginia soil as our nation's foundational date."
Moreover, as Reason magazine reported, "School districts in Chicago, Washington, D.C., and Buffalo, New York, have decided to update their history curricula to include the material, which posits that the institution of slavery was so embedded in the country's DNA that the country's true founding could be said to have occurred in 1619, rather than in 1776."
Yet Jones now suggests this was all misunderstood.
Last week Willamette University Professor Seth Cotlar gushed over the work on Twitter, saying it "is not about history." Rather, "It's about memory: about what parts of the nation's past we should hold in our memories going forward & about how we tell the story of the nation to our children."
Jones wholeheartedly supported Cotlar.
In a series of replies, she tweeted in part: "He is right: The fight over the 1619 Project is not about history. It is about memory. I've always said that the 1619 Project is not a history. It is a work of journalism that explicitly seeks to challenge the national narrative and, therefore, the national memory."
"The project has always been as much about the present as it is the past. The crazy thing is, the 1619 Project is using history and reporting to make an argument. It never pretended to be a history."
Except when it did.
In November, Jones herself tweeted that the 1619 Project was "American history, not black history."
Writing in December in The New York Times Magazine, Executive Editor Jake Silverstein noted, "The goal of The 1619 Project is to reframe American history by considering what it would mean to regard 1619 as our nation's birth year."
In July Oprah Winfrey and the movie distributor Lionsgate announced a partnership with Jones, for which she undoubtedly will end up fabulously wealthy, to turn the 1619 series into a "multi-media history of slavery and its effects in America for a worldwide audience."
"What then," Napoleon once asked, "is, generally speaking, the truth of history?" His answer: "A fable agreed upon."
Jones, it seems, wants us to agree that her "fable" isn't history, except when it suits her purpose!

It's good but hard-blooding feeling how many minority shaped democrats and institutional Trump! Rep Greg Evers, Fla., an American peace deals with the Middle East and U.S.-Iran relations. DespiteCen's doubts on Middle East peace deals, "Trump isn't alone"
